

s the trap.

stinate because you're lazy. You procrastinate feels alive. The deadline looms, the panic arrives, you're brilliant. You've told yourself for years that nder pressure.

the center of the trap. The pressure isn't making aking you desperate, and the desperation feels se it's the only way your brain lets you start.

planners, the timers, the systems. They always y solve the wrong problem. You don't need better nt. You need to see that the rush is a drug, not a t ask you to become a dull, steady worker. It the rush you're protecting was never doing the

and you can do it without the panic.

A FIELD GUIDE • FOR THE STUDENT

AROUSAL PROCRASTINATOR

The Complete Guide to Breaking
Your Arousal Procrastination Pattern

—AROUSAL PROCRASTINATOR —PROCRASTITYPE

H O R

and spent years studying the mechanics of self-ing his own exit. He writes about r, and the surprisingly simple mechanisms that

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD

WRITTEN BY

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD