

n't the problem.

your stomach right now, that low hum of dread, them. The email you haven't opened. The decision lying for weeks. The project that seems to grow you leave it.

planners. The systems. The brutal Monday-s. You've forced yourself through tasks on hating every second, and then collapsed back deeper than before. You've quietly concluded that guilt for this.

d you're not alone.

astination is not a character flaw. It's a trap, a loop so automatic you've confused it with your dread you feel before a task is real. What causes not ask you to push harder. It shows you the trap that you stop walking into it. People who've broken e don't describe it as a battle won. They describe

A FIELD GUIDE • FOR THE STUDENT

AVOIDANCE PROCRASTINATOR

The Complete Guide to Breaking Your Avoidance Procrastination Pattern ed, not because they got tougher, but because were afraid of turned out to be smoke.

H O R

and spent years studying the mechanics of self-ing his own exit. He writes about r, and the surprisingly simple mechanisms that

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD

WRITTEN BY

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD