

the problem, not you.

You're lost. The tasks aren't hard, they're just ve piled up into a fog that hides the next step. You e to start, so you don't.

planners, the color-coded systems, the fresh k for three days, and then the fog rolls back in.
u're undisciplined, but because the systems fight re fog.

ination isn't a character flaw. It's a habit of never g, built out of overwhelm and reinforced by relief.

another productivity system. It clears the fog at order becomes something you can see, not must force.

A FIELD GUIDE • FOR THE STUDENT

PASSIVE PROCRASTINATOR

The Complete Guide to Breaking
Your Passive Procrastination Pattern

H O R

and spent years studying the mechanics of self-ing his own exit. He writes about r, and the surprisingly simple mechanisms that

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD

WRITTEN BY

JONATHAN NORTHWOOD